

I would like to become a dealer but I can not because I have no store front. What I don't understand is how you let the dealers get away with breaking your own companies guidelines. I know you set pricing and do not allow listing prices below certain amounts. The problem is now the dealers don't list the price at all and make you place the item into the shopping cart to disclose the pricing details. I think this is a violation to your agreement and a dishonorable way to conduct business. So I would like to report <http://www.knifecenter.com> for violating your companies policies and inform you of their poor business practices. They refuse to list prices on their web site for your products because they offer them at prices below your allowed price and make customers place them into the shopping cart to see the price in which they sell them for. I urge you to stop companies from doing this practice and trying to cheat Benchmade. I would love to speak to someone in the company about these practices. Thank you for your time. J. Benson

Frequently Asked Questions:

[Q: What is the status of my knife I sent in for the Warranty/LifeSharp Service?

A: The current turn-around time is 25-30 business days. Please this time frame, and if you haven't received your knife by then, please feel welcome to contact us at info@benchmade.com to inquire about the status.

[Q: How do I order an automatic (restricted) knife?]

A: Benchmade follows Federal Regulation Guidelines in selling/shipping automatic knives. This means that we can only ship/sell autos across our (Oregon) state lines if the recipient is an Active Duty Military or Law Enforcement service member. We also recommend learning your local state/city laws in regards to carrying and possessing an automatic knife as there are many various local laws. You can get approved for purchasing an Automatic knife by registering for a Military/Law Enforcement web account and uploading a digital image of your Active Duty Military or Law Enforcement Photo ID. Review and Approval happens typically within 1 business days, but can take up to 3 business days. Once approved, you can add autos to your cart
